DESCRIPTION
Three Princesses for Roland, follows a tough, funny family which, like all families, is both touching and repelling : poor, like many families and unique in the eyes of the director, who has known them since childhood. Roland's suicide is the pretext for making a documentary that speaks to us about poverty, love, hatred, the present, the past, alcohol, violence. With tenderness, the director introduces to three generations of women with similar lives which, amazingly, repeat certain cycles. An essay without judgment or commentary, providing food for thought on both our heritage and our legacy.
