DESCRIPTION

Meanderings through a city and associations between sequences of animals enclosed in zoos and their depiction in furniture and objects. Notes on language customs, confinement, abnormal behaviour, nostalgia for savagery, a museum of natural history and male-female relations. Filmed in Super 8 and video, this tape was produced after the famous case of a Japanese cannibal that rocked the Parisian media.

FURTHER INFORMATION

"Now Michèle Waquant's video camera is filming white (polar?) bears. Here she examines the erratic behaviour of these animals in captivity. In half-tone, her allusions refer to the wild and civilised worlds, to cannibalism, to virility and femininity, in a sort of journey between city and zoo".
