DESCRIPTION
Circa. 1967 is a silent film composed from a collected source of 8mm footage shot by a group of anonymous filmmakers in New York during the late sixties. It is clear that the filmmakers who shot the footage were not everyday amateurs yet people with hungry and curious visual sensibilities. In this found footage film a serial grid is added to the entire composition emphasizing image and rhythm. Part historical documentary and lyrical essay Circa. 1967 observes and celebrates universal life in a familiar context.
